Many women dream about meeting Mr. Right. They dream about having a man that respects them, makes them feel secure, and makes them the center of his universe. But is that what women really want? That's the question that Cupid, You're Fired presents. This story is a detailed narrative of my experiences with the many women I have encountered from high school up to my adult years. As the reader, you get to step into the shoes of a good guy who seems to catch bad breaks in regards to my relationships. Despite the kindness, security, transparency, and respect that is given to each woman, somehow it isn't enough. What more does a man have to do? There is a cliché that exists: "Good men don't exist." Maybe that's due to another cliché: "Nice guys finish last."
