It has been said that Christianity has an image problem among those who were born in the late twentieth century. Statistics expose the church today as hypocritical, judgmental, sheltered, and overly political, to name just a few of the negative perceptions. Tempted to write off such perceptions as the cynicism of secular youth? Young people inside the church feel the same way? How has the body of Christ on earth become so unChristian? Experienced young adult pastor Russell Rathbun responds to the question and the perceptions with a challenging invitation to be transformed from unChristian to nuChristian by taking seriously the critique of a new generation.
