The Reminiscences of a Marine John A. Lejeune

When General John A. Lejeune conceived the idea of the Marine Corps Association in 1913, and became its first active head, he set forth the purposes for which MCA was founded: - to disseminate knowledge of the military art and science among members; - to provide for the professional advancement of its members; - to foster the spirit and preserve the traditions of the United States Marine Corps; - to increase the efficiency of the Marine Corps and to further the interest of the military and naval services in all ways not inconsistent with the good of the general government. These purposes have remained unchanged over the years and provide guidelines for the MCA Heritage Library series, of which "The Reminiscences of a Marine" is a part.
