Since this book first published in 2006, the field of information visualization has changed drastically. First, information visualization has exploded online and on other digital platforms. Second, information graphics reporting has encompassed nearly every sector of communications and business. Visual reporting skills are not only relevant in traditional news environments, but many other professions as well. This edition seeks to address these changes by providing learners with a cross-platform, cross-industry approach to instruction. It will include a robust, dynamic website complete with regularly updated examples of print, online and broadcast graphics, as well as useful tutorials and exercises.

- Covers everything you need to know about reporting with graphics?information visualization and graphic design from a journalism perspective.
- Includes a companion website with regularly updated examples of print, online, and broadcast graphics; tutorials; and exercises.
- Each chapter concludes with a relevant case study, essay from an expert, and two assignments. When appropriate, resource files (such as Illustrator templates, images, and/or other visual reference material) for these projects will also be provided on the companion website.
