Fashion Goes to the Dogs (A Kate Killoy Mystery) (Volume 1) Peggy Gaffney

Kate Killoy is an expert at two things; knitting design and dogs. She arrives in New York City to launch her first line of fashion knits and exhibit her champion Samoyed, Dillon, but instead is drawn into a foreign world of international intrigue and attempts on her life. She even finds a dead body on her fashion show's runway. It's February, Fashion week is winding down and the country's best known dog show is gearing up for a week of activities. In steps twenty-four year old Kate Killoy who has been showing dogs since she the age of seven and is launching a career as a designer. She is ready to take the fashion world by storm – those fashionable members who love dogs. She's invited her dog breeding friends to model her line of Fancier Fashions, before they compete in the best known dog show in the country. However, when she arrives at the event hotel she finds a poster of herself she never posed for, an FBI agent ready to arrest her and a bitchy dog groomer upsetting all her models. Her Irish temper and New England stubbornness keep her going 'til the attempts on her life start piling up to the point where the police complain she is ruining the year's crime statistics. She needs help. Along comes Harry Foyle, a former math geek for the FBI. But this dapper ex-agent, who sees the world through numbers, may pay a high price for keeping this sassy and fearless dog nut safe. He might lose his heart — or worse — his life
